Report Curley Will Quit Congress Seat

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Representative James M. Curley, Mayor-elect of Boston, today made known his intention to resign his seat in Congress, when he informed Representative Treadway that his office in the House office building might be occupied by Treadway at once.

Treadway requested the privilege of having the use of Curley's office as soon as the latter resigned, and today the assistant secretary of the new Mayor has busy packing up his effects preparatory to shipment to Boston.

SAVE 86 FROM WRECK; SHIPS CRASH IN FOG

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 30.—Rammed amidship and cut nearly in two in a dense fog off the Virginia coast early today, the steamship Monroe of the Old Dominion line sank within twenty minutes with a loss of forty-seven lives.

FIVE HUNDRED IN SEARCH FOR ELEANOR ARLIN

Final plans were made today to the hunt for the body of Eleanor Arlin, the bookkeeper and stenographer, who disappeared from her home in Brookline, on January 3, and who is believed to be dead somewhere in the thickly wooded sections between Brookline and Brighton.

Five hundred Boy Scouts of Greater Boston, mostly from upper high school grades, who have volunteered their services, will take up the search tomorrow. The woods between Chestnut Hill and Newton Centre, the Corey Hill woods, the thick country southeast of Jamaica Pond and out of the way places in the same section will be given the greatest attention.

The woods have been divided up into small sections and each group of Boy Scouts is to be given a restricted territory. In this way it is hoped every inch of ground will be covered. Other districts gone over by the Brookline police will also be searched. Near the Lost Pond section, Putnam Meadows, Hammond's Pond, Jamaica Pond and the Arnold Arboretum.

$125,000 LOSS IN BIG WOBURN FACTORY FIRE

A disastrous general alarm fire today destroyed the five-story building known as Factory B of the American Hide and Leather Association at Western Highlands, caused a loss of $125,000, drove ten families from nearby tenements to the street and threatened the entire Highlands tanning district. The fire was the most spectacular in Western in years.

Terrific explosions marked the progress of the fire which at times sent burning brands all over the Highlands district of Woburn. The fire danger was increased a thousandfold by the fact that within a hundred feet of the burned factory stands the 165-foot high gasometer of the Woburn Gas Company, containing about a million cubic feet of gas—enough to have blown the entire district to atoms had the gas been ignited.

About the perimeter and the gasometer storage shed the Woburn fire men, assisted by companies from Westchester, Wakefield, Reading and Stoneham, fought for several hours.

Paul Deroulede, Famous Poet, Dead

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The death of Paul Deroulede, poet, patriot and one of the most remarkable men ever produced by France, was announced today. He passed away at Nice at the age of sixty-eight. His career as a political agitator resulted in his being exiled more than a decade ago on the charge of sedition, but he was subsequently pardoned by President Loubet.

MILLER FOUND NOT GUILTY IN SHEA TRAGEDY

Patriot Charles W. Miller of Lagrange street station is acquitted of the charge of manslaughter, which was brought against him because he shot and killed Ralph P. Shea in a Warren street hallway in the course of a disorder on the night before June 17, last.

"Not guilty" was the finding in a sealed verdict which was opened before Judge Chase in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court at 1:30 today.

A moment later Miller was the centre of a throng of about sixty brother officers, who were shaking him by the hand and congratulating him on being vindicated by the jury for doing his duty and trying to enforce the law.

The jury came in at 5:30. Judge Chase took the bench. Miller, who had been driving the Lagrange street patrol wagon on night duty, as usual, came in looking grave. He took his seat just back of the bar enclosure.

At Clark Lyman, foreman of the jury, took from his pocket the sealed envelope containing the verdict, which had been reached at 4:15, the night before. Mr. Lyman opened and read the "Not guilty" finding. Miller shook hands with John I. Foster and Alexander Neal, his counsel. Then Miller was formally discharged. He fled past the jury, and the "Not guilty" finding and their congratulations. Judge Chase looked on, seeming quite interested in the way the policemen took the verdict.

Curley Campaign Cost Him $4,000

Mayor-elect Curley contributed $4,000 personally to his campaign fund, according to returns filed with City Clerk Donovan today by Mr. Curley. This money was paid to Francis L. Daly, treasurer of the Curley Campaign Fund.

SUIT REVEALS STRANGE STORY OF RICH WIDOW

A remarkable story has been brought to light by the filing at East Cambridge of a petition for the appointment of a conservator for the estate of Mrs. Mary C. Benson, seventy-eight, a rich widow, who is said to have been outside the old mansion at the corner of Highland street and Massachusetts avenue during the last eight years.

Mrs. Benson, who is the widow of Mason D. Benson, once treasurer of the old Fitchburg Railroad, to blind and feeble. Until recently she has had her daughter, Miss Maud Benson, to care for her, but a few weeks ago Miss Benson died.

Neither daughter had until then been inseparable, and had lived lives of extreme retirement. Although Miss Benson was ill for weeks, she refused to allow a doctor to be called, and was to the end so completely the mistress of the house that no physician was permitted to see her without being closed doors.

The first old mansion in which they lived, with its spacious hall, is assessed at $4,000. The amount of the date left when Mason Benson died is not known as the widow never had an inventory of it.

Soon after Benson's death, his son and daughter went to Philadelphia, where Mrs. Benson's mother, 2d, there they stayed, taking care of their mother until her death. Neither daughter in Cambridge, says to Mrs. Benson's mother also left considerable property.

Some seven or eight years after leaving Cambridge Mrs. Benson and 2d Maud Benson returned to live in 11 Broad street house, to go to court on fourteen or fifteen rooms, and 12 did not open it up generally.

To refuse to take in servants, and to retire by themselves.

After 2d, Gould of Malden, a nurse of Mrs. Benson, was among her few callers. After the nurse's daughter died, he saw she was not a conservator, on account of her blindness, but Mrs. Benson objected to having him, so he tore up his petition.

As a result of a trip to Worcester, in the course of which she was to marry, was already married. Mrs. E. E. Williams of Boston is at a Worcester hotel considering legal action to regain property she declares is now in the man's name.

Mrs. Williams says: "I came to Worcester two days ago, and saw this man. I have known him for seven years. I had told him to buy a house here. I told him I was going to Philadelphia and he said he would sell the house and come there in the Spring."

"Then I heard he was married. I had a key to the house where he lives. The child of the furniture in the house is mine. I went there, but the lock had been changed. So I broke the glass in a window—cutting my wrist—and got in and went upstairs."

"His sister telephoned for the police, but he did not want to make any charge, and he hid my footprints. Then, after they had come, he sent me to the hospital in a taxi. He was married only a few weeks ago."

MRS. BLAKENEY SAYS SHE WAS POTATO TARGET

Mrs. Edward A. Blakeney, accused of shooting her potatoes and other things at her husband, today went on the witness stand in his suit for divorce to resume telling her side of the story.

She made a general and specific denial of the allegations of the libelous and said that is the hot potato episode it was her husband and not herself who did the shooting.

Stock, shuffling, medicine, dishware, cutlery, a hammer, an axe and a hot flat iron were among the articles she is alleged to have thrown.

Blakeney, under cross-examination, denied he had been sentenced to the Plymouth County Jail for non-payment of taxes.

Mrs. Blakeney of No. 23 Croftland street, who was called by attorneys for the Blakeney, told the Court that Blakeney had profane language when addressing his wife, and she said of the incident when he had threatened that she would be turned over to him. She said that she had thrown Blakeney's hat and throttle his Charles E. Blakeney, the older son of the couple, said his father sent him to his mother with a message that he the father would give her full and a title to some property if she would seek the divorce.

Asks Anti Vivisection Exhibit for Boston

Members of the New England Anti-vivisection Society at their annual meeting held here were told that 1913 was the greatest year for the cause in the history of the United States. The organization gained 19 members while its work quadrupled. Mrs. Jessica L. C. Henderson, secretary, urged that an anti-vivisection exhibit, such as has been made in Philadelphia, be shown in Boston in the Spring.

$23 TO EUROPE IS OPENING CUT IN RATE WAR

As a result of the ocean travel rate war, beginning Monday, the British steamship companies, including the Cunard and the White Star Lines, will sell third-class tickets from Boston to the Continent for $23.

This announcement comes together with the news that the Anchor line will soon start service between Boston and Queenstown, making the eighth new transatlantic passenger carrying line to enter this port within a year.

The drop of the stevedore rate to $23 is a reduction of $3.50. Further reductions are predicted.

The lines have increased their agent commissions from $2 to $5 on each ticket sold to the Continent.

The trouble started over the Hamilton-American line, it is said. The fact that the Anchor line has entered the field is taken to indicate a counter-move to the project of the Germans to run a Queenstown-Boston service and their entry into the Canadian trade.

Higginson Finds 'Lunacy' in Congress

"Congress is made up of a lot of lunatics, with a few earnest men," declared Major Henry L. Higginson at a Williams College dinner at the Exchange Club.

"They have created a currency system which may place the burden on the poor man instead of the rich man. And now they are planning a death blow at stock exchange."

Saved from Air Tight Vault in U. S. Mint

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—William Taylor was rescued from a money vault in the United States mint, where he had been caught by the sudden swinging of the doors. A workman forced a small hole through the lock and passed in a paper on which was written the combination. The vault was air tight.

QUICK AND SURE STOMACH DOCTOR

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Sourness in five minutes.

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach rarely within five minutes.

If your meals don't sit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or, if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour plasma, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, flatulence or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal cramping. This with all ease and ease, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your health with noxious odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough Pape's Diapepsin to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

COMPERS TAKES BEER, BUT IS NO WORSE FOR IT

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 29.—Samuel Compers, replying to charges that the executive council of the American Federation of Labor are "base flatterers," retorted that he takes a drink of beer himself and is as good in every way as he ever was.

Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, several days ago charged that if the copper strike in Michigan should be used it would be due to the inactivity of the executive board of the American Federation of Labor.

Compers declared the Federation had done everything possible, that it would be impossible to levy an assessment for the copper mine strikers of Michigan and denied that the organization is "reactionary, fossilized, worn-out and dead." He said:

"Of the eleven men who compose the executive council, eight are teachers who never touch a drop of alcohol. Two of the men are moderate drinkers as any man who ever takes a drink. For myself I take a glass of beer, when the day's work is done. I challenge any man to prove otherwise than that I am as good a man mentally and physically as any other was, and I reached my sixty-fourth year last Tuesday."

"Fossilized and dead mean the same, but I submit that an organization can't be these and at the same time be reactionary, for that means taking backward. The history of the organization shows that it is not so."

"I have given and will continue to give all that is in me to further the strike of the copper miners. No action could be more unjust than that of Mr. Moyer."

ARMY REPLIES FROM 112 MILES TO NOTHING

The AMERICAN'S puzzle about the army and the messenger now has families divided against them.

For instance: Mrs. Harriett A. Hamblett writes on the top-hat of a post card from Misses, N. H., that the messenger walked forty-two miles.

But young Master John Alden Hamblett ushers the bottom half of the same post card to write his father that the messenger walked fifty-six miles.

And there you are. Arthur McDougall of No. 37 Third street, Fall River, declares the messenger strode forty-two miles, but Larkwell McDougall writes on the same piece of paper that Friend Messenger went only sixteen miles.

E. H. Hart of Arlington Heights decides that "the scamp rolled, walked or crawled just sixty-five and one-third miles."

The solutions, which keep pouring in faster than either army march or messenger walked, vary much. They run from 112 miles, which C. J. Downing of West Newbury sent in "just for a rough guess," as he says, clear down to nothing at all.

D. J. Connolly of Waltham writes: "The messenger did not have to travel at all to go from the rear to the front. The front and the rear could be together from the start."

SAVES ITS TWO FEET.
A. T. Flint of Kingston avenue, Somerville, gives the messenger a two-foot route, as follows:

"What was the rear in the front when the army begins its day's march. He steps to the front and steps back, making two feet, and is there at the rear when the army marches twenty-eight miles. The question which is back of all this worry is as follows: A messenger leaves the rear of an army twenty-eight miles long as it begins its day's march.

He goes to the front and at once returns, reaching the rear when the army camps for the night. How far did he travel, if the army marched twenty-eight miles the day?

Can You Do This in 30 Seconds?

If You Can You Are a Perfect Normal Adult, According to the Scientists

Wise gentlemen interested in race betterment have been talking industriously at Battle Creek, where they make the things to eat and cure your diseases.

In our opinion wise nature planned pretty well for race betterment some billions of millions of years before Battle Creek was founded, but that is another story.

To interest you and give you an amusing test of your mental quickness, we present today an experiment invented by the race betterers of Battle Creek.

Look at the letters arranged in the square immediately underneath this:

Lkase evay dawma kaze zata enjaf aruja ahaly ihve flap xmvra pagra aughv rthv yraa zaqwb qiajv mvgpa majt abeta jgafv ahuya. Oqal iumwa kagpv baxap zsoab cmfraz ceta aqiza igabg narbq wagad alcbg bapx vypxa mawfe vtjat klpjee.

You will see that the letter "A" occurs in almost every one of these artificially manufactured words.

The scientists say that unless you can take your pencil and mark out every "A" in the above writing inside of thirty seconds you ARE NOT A NORMAL MAN.

If you can take your pencil and mark out the "A" in every one of these words in thirty seconds, then you ARE a "normal adult" and your brain is working properly.

The theory of the scientists is that the normal, quick mind should be able to see the letter "A" in every one of these words, give the order through the nerves to the muscles of the fingers and mark out every one of those "A's" in thirty seconds. If you can do that your eye, your brain, your nerves and your muscles are working well together.

But if it takes you more than thirty seconds there is something the matter. So they say.

Here follows a second experiment of the same kind:

QYKPIEDHHTADGAACTIXMIFPAQZTAACVAOWLYX

GAAQYENPACNTHNGKAMRBUVAGZANWNSXJAZ
GKXABHGVSYVCLAKUKCWAFFWHTQYAPAAAOH

You should be able to take your pencil and mark out every "A" in the above foolish collection of letters. And the whole thing should take not more than FORTY seconds.

Try it if you like and see how nearly "normal" you are. If it takes you forty-three seconds, then you are three seconds away from normal.

After you have tried the experiment you will know what you are—according to the scientists.

But you will not know very much. As a matter of fact, a wise man really normal WOULD PROBABLY NOT TRY THE EXPERIMENT AT ALL. HE WOULD HAVE SOMETHING BETTER TO DO.

Besides, eyesight has little to do with the normal adult brain. And the marking out of these letters would depend a good deal on daylight.

In the second place, the normal brain that is carrying a real load could not drop its load and hop about, marking out letters here and there.

This could be done more quickly by a brain free from serious thought than by a thinking brain.

If you could teach a chicken to tell the letter "A" from other letters, it could mark out every "A" in this writing in about five seconds—which no human being could do.

You have seen a chicken picking up kernels of corn. You have only to imagine that same hen marking out these "A's" as fast as she picks up the corn. Then you can see that, according to the scientists of Battle Creek, the adult hen would be far better than the adult human being.

However, all of these things are amusing—and are submitted to you here because they stir up a little thought. That means that a new part of the brain works—and the main object of new papers is to persuade the reader to use some part of his brain that ordinarily lies idle.

WORLD MOVE THE CAPITAL
Dear Sir—Speaking of improved highways reminds me of the new road to the Capital City. It must be evident to all that the great Capital is fast outgrowing its capacity. As a capital for a nation like the United States it is only a partial success. All national buildings should be the center of the nation's plan of which the legislative assembly are the center. It is the reason of order, culture, national feeling, a capital city should be free from the importations of trades and professions, and of the most, too.

make a capital city in the geographical center of our country will probably be the work of years. But it is time to think of the starting in the United States. C. P. GARDNER, United States Senator.
A BULGARIAN GAITHER.
Dear Sir—Allow me to express the gratitude of the Bulgarians living here to the AMERICAN for its active role in the life of the starting in the Balkans. All I can say is, "Thanks to the AMERICAN from the bottom of my heart" for the help to my fatherland. A BULGARIAN.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XXVI.

ANY, MARVIN, about before the door of Delaine's apartment and listened to the hum of the descending elevator. She started to push the bell, then paused tremulously. For the hundredth time she repeated to herself the story that she had determined to tell the artist.

Of course, he would bring up the story of his meeting with

Julia in Paris. She was always talking about her. "Yes, Mr. De-laine," Carly had planned to say,

"Julia told me she saw you. She is playing shoptalk just now. She does all kinds of funny things to get the real facts she wants for her stories. She was really terribly embarrassed at meeting you in that way."

The girl repeated her fabrication glibly to herself, and, after another moment of hesitation, rang the bell. The impostive Chinese servant opened the door, and Carly, nodding brightly to him, went out into the large room where she was to work, the door of which stood open. Delaine was sitting at his desk, absorbed in his manuscript that lay before him. He looked up as Carly entered, and she herself flushed under his steady gaze.

"Ah! Sit down, Miss Marvin,"

he said, politely. "I will be ready for you very soon now."

He turned again to his manuscript, and Carly, after taking off her hat and jacket, uncovered her machine and sat waiting. She watched him as he felt almost guilty at having accepted his friend's in-itation yesterday. She wondered if the author knew that, in spite of his warning, she had launched with Somerville.

Delaine, glancing up suddenly,

met her eyes. She looked away quickly, and blushed confusedly.

"I shall be with you in an instant, Miss Marvin," he said, folding up the manuscript he had been correcting. "How are you this fine day?"

"Very well," answered Carly awkwardly. She wished that it was going to speak of Julia he would do it now and get it over with.

"That's good," was all he said in reply. He filed his pipe from a silver jar on the table, puffing away for a few seconds in silence.

"Now," he announced at last,

"we'll get to work. I have about decided not to use that start I dictated to you yesterday—at least not yet. I hope you are in the mode for dictation this morning.

For I have a story that's been settling in my mind ever since I awoke at dawn."

For the next hour Kelley Delaine strode up and down the room, sucking on his old black briar pipe, and dictating in short, forcible sentences. When the quaint clock on the mantel chimed the hour he paused.

"That will be all for today," he announced. "Yes," he said, "I best think I ever did," he added, as he turned to his desk.

"I certainly interested me," Carly said, smiling in return, "though you had no going too far to give me a chance to really appreciate it. It must be wonderful to be able to write so easily. You said tentatively and waited for his response. If he was going to speak of his conversation with Julia, there was an opportunity for him to do so.
